- Licensure is addressed
- Food service is addressed
- Family engagement is addressed
- Community collaboration is clarified
- Bidders Conferences are March 2nd & 20th
- RFP is due April 28th
- Grant Read is May 18th
- Awards announced July 15th

The 21st Century Community Learning Centers (CCLC) Request for Proposal (RFP) for the grant year 2007-2008 is available in the CCIP. The application is available as of February 1, 2007 and application guidelines are available by February 5, 2007. The RFP has been revised this year to reflect the necessity of supporting students in a very holistic way.

Areas that applicants must now address in more detail include licensure, food service, family engagement, and community collaboration. These components of the grant have been revised to place emphasis on these critical areas.

Diane Schnieder-Farmer, the ODE 21st CCLC Coordinator, assures grantees that at least 20 grants will be awarded this year.

Applicants are encouraged to only apply for funding that is necessary to serve the number of students they promise to serve. Lower grant amounts will free up money for more grants to be awarded, and lower amounts are often easier to sustain over time.

In order to reapply for new 21st CCLC funding, existing grantees must have all budget updates approved, PPIC data complete and up-to-date, have met all APR promises from their original grant, and 3rd through 5th year grantees must have submitted an annual outside evaluation to ODE.

Bidders conferences will be held on March 2nd and 20nd at the State Library of Ohio. The RFP must be complete in the CCIP on April 28. The grant read will be on May 18th and award notices will be sent on July 15th, 2007

Students at Johnsville Elementary
21st CCLC

21st CCLC Networking Opportunities Grow

21st CCLC grantees will have more chances to share ideas and discuss challenges, successes, and strategies for supporting Ohio's children through regional "Brown Bag" luncheons. "Brown Bag" meetings will be held over lunch hours in the northeast, northwest, southeast, southwest, and central areas of the state at least twice this school year. "Brown Bags" offer a time for grantees to discuss topics that concern them, share thoughts on products that are marketed to 21st CCLC grantees, discuss regional resources, and ask questions of the Ohio Department of Education.

21st CCLC Legacy Team Members and OSU staff will be hosting these meetings along with help from the Ohio Child Care Resource and Referral agencies.

See the contact information for Legacy Team Members on page 4 to find out who to call about "Brown Bags" in your area.

Internet Safety

Being able to easily access the wide array of free and inexpensive resources available to educator and youth development professionals is incredibly valuable to adults and children alike. Allowing students free access to the internet is also a potentially dangerous practice. Adults are aware of the broad and fascinating array of information available on the web, and of the dangers for children surfing the web, but children are not always so aware of the potential danger.

The Center for Missing and Exploited Children has created a website for children that includes resources for all ages. There are interesting videos that provide segments about the dangers of unsafe Internet practices targeted for use with middle school and high school students. Each video comes with a companion 'activity card' that serves as a viewing guide and reinforcement tool.

and social development. It also seeks to identify, evaluate, and disseminate the most promising multi-systemic (family, school, community) interventions that increase learning and social adjustment among boys of color. Maximum Award: varies. Eligibility: Public school districts in the U.S.

Engaging Students in Activities

Some of our students are not interested in academic work, such as homework, tutoring, or other activities they see connected to the school day. Some of these students are overwhelmed with school work, some are bored, and others are disenfranchised with the culture of formal education.

Yet our mission as 21st CCLCs is to reach those disconnected children. So how do we do that?

Engaging students in academic work is not that different from engaging them in youth development activities. Douglass Reeves of the Center for Performance Assessment made the following suggestions in a monthly e-newsletter:

Reeves heads up his suggestions with the overarching theme of choice—not choice in whether to engage in the assigned work, but in how to engage.

Reeves suggests that practitioners provide a number of different formats to cover the necessary academic material and allow students to select from a menu of activities.

Reeves also recommends having the option of electronic media /games as tools to give students a enjoyable way to interact with the material and get immediate feedback.

Reeves suggests that we allow students to generate the rubrics that define the expectations around the work they are doing,, Reeves notes that students may naturally structure expectations to include classmates who learn in different ways.

And finally, connect the work to real-life. Academic skills are much more meaningful when connected to everyday use.

Johnsville Father- Son Activities are a part of their 21st CCLC family engagement.
